American AgCredit Customers Share Jams and Jellies with Lawmakers in Washington D.C.

Wichita, KS — As part of a national Farm Credit Farmers Market on July 26, 2017, Eric and Paula Sims from Walton, Kansas, sent their Morning Harvest Farm jams and jellies to Washington, D.C.

The Farmers Market was the centerpiece of Farm Credit's legislative fly-in aimed to educate Members of Congress how Farm Credit fulfills its mission to support rural communities and agriculture with reliable, consistent credit and financial services.

The Sims' jams and jellies were part of dozens of Farm Credit supported products from all across the country. They have been an American AgCredit customer for nearly 10 years. Morning Harvest Farm was the Sims' retirement hobby until it quickly grew. They now run a Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) enterprise, and they offer a diverse selection of all-grass, hormone-free beef, pastured pork, free-range chickens, miscellaneous artisan and farmstead breads, and jams and jellies.
